THE GAZETTE.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 31, 1858. LAW AND LAWYERS-THE CHAN-

CELLORSHIP.

The literary editor of the Philadelphia Press, who, by the way, shows decided tact the commencement of the present century in producing articles of varied and general interest, gives us the following:

"If the Lord Chancellor of England could only obtain permanency of office, he might esteem bimself a fortunate man. His station places him next but one in rank to the Royal Family-the Archbishop of Canterbury alone taking precedence of him-and also makes him preside over the political discussions and legal proceedings of the House of Lords .-In addition to this, he is at the head of the law and of the judges of England. To compensate him, a fixed salary of $50,000 is paid him while in office, and be has a life-pension of $25,000 on his retirement. The other Judges receive pensions after fifteen years' service, or on retiring from ill health.

Nor is this all. The Lord Chancellor is made a peer on taking office. Thus Sir Frederick Thesiger sits in the House of Lords, not merely as a Chancellor, but also as Baron Chelmesford. Were be only a Commoner, as Chancellors frequently were in the power of speaking or voting in the former assembly. As Lord Chelmesford he is an hereditary legislator, the limitation of his patent of nobility expressly giving succession in his title to his "male beirs lawfully begotten." Thus, Lords Lyndburst, Brougham, St. Leonards, and Cranworth, continue to sit in the House of Lords, though they have severally ceased to occupy the Wool-

Chancellor, in parliamentary parlance, may require explanation in this country. At a remote period, when wool was considered the staple produce of England-long before Merino, Saxon, Hungarian and Australian fleeces were in the market, commanding higher prices-the etiquette of Parliament, anxious to compliment trade, placed a woolsack in the House of Lords, as the seat of the Chancellor who presides over that assembly .-Hundreds of years have passed since that seat was first placed, but the custom continues. The woolsack, at present, and for a ideality. It looks like a square cotton-bale, and for sale by JAMES ENTWISLE, JR., covered with red damask, and its occurant need not feel the want of "arms" and a regular back to bis seat, seeing that he can and does very well support himself by means of substantial cushions. In fact, independent of the peerage and $50,000 a year, the "Woolsack" is a comfortable seat.

Besides pay, the Chancellor has liberal patronage. He bas a voice potential in advising the Crown as to the appointment of every other judicial and legal official. He appoints, and can remove, all justices of the peace, usually acting as county magistrates upon the Lord-Lieutenants' recommendation. He appoints to the seven hundred Crown livings, each of which is valued at $100 a year in the Queen's books-which actually includes many valuable livings, some of them valued formerly at $10, but now, from the increase of population and trade, $5,000 a year. He has the patronage of all offices in his own court.

His duties, presumed and actual, are heavy. As a Privy Counsel and Cabinet Minister, he participates in the responsible task of governing the British Empire-advising his coleagues on all mixed subjects of law and politics, and all matters relating to police, law, and justice. He is officially er of the members of the Royal Family, in case of doubt or difficulty, in which their interests are involved. He is the exoflicio guardian, and absolutely so if the property be "in Chancery."

His executive duties make him preside by prescription as Speaker of the House of Lords, and also as their Lordships' chief judge in their court of appellate jurisdiction, before which appeals come from every court of law and equity in England, Ireland and Scotland. The Chancellor, with a singular want of delicacy, often hears and decides upon appeals against his own decision! So between the Cabinet, the Privy Council, the House of Lords, and the Chancery Court, the lawyer who is Lord Chancellor has his hands always full. By the Catholic Relief act of 1829, a Roman Catholic cannot be Lord Chancellor .--It was feared that he might dispense church patronage not quite to the benefit of the church. But the original holders of the of- by fice were not only Catholice, but generally ecclesiastics. The Chancellor was a sort of confidential charlain to the King, or, before the reformation, his confessor and conscience keeper. He then was the King's chief secretary, advising the sovereign on various temporal matters; preparing and transcribing royal mandates, grants, and charters, and giving them validity by affixing the King's seal. His appointment actually took place by the great seal being formally delivered to him. Cardinal Wolsey was Chancellor to Henry VIII. The last churchman who filled the office was Williams, Protestant Archbishop of York, in the last five years (1621 to 1625) of the reign of James I. In the same century the Earl of Shaftsbury, who was neither an ecclesiastic nor a lawyer, was appointed Lord Chancellor. Much of the Chancellor's judicial business has been greatly lightened during the last forty years, by given him assistant or auxiliary judges. The Master of the Rolls, (annual salary $30,000 with retiring pension of $18,000,) is an Equity Judge of great antiquity, with a separate court and the power of hearing and determining originally the same matters as the Lord Chancellor, whose signature must be attached, however, to his orders or decrees before they can be enrolled. There are, also, with equal powers, two Lord Justices of Appeal each with annual salaries of $30,000 and three Vice Chancellors, each with $25,000

The Chancellor has one drawback-its want of permanency. Every other British Judge holds a life appointment; the Lord Chancellor goes out of office when his party do, for his is a political appointment.—
It is true that his fall is broken by a lifepension of $25,000. No British lawyer, if he once has occupied the judicial judge, can ever return to private practice. Hence, large salaries, (though not more than half of a successful lawyer's income at the bar,) with liberal retiring peneions, tempt the very best lawyers to abandon the practice for the administration of the law. The case of Lord St. Leonards (Sir Edward Sugden) is in point. Unquestionably the first equity lawyer in England, be accepted the Chancellorship of Ireland in December, 1834, and retained it for just three months, when Peel's Administration, which appointed him had to relinquish office. At the bar, his practice has been $100,000 a year, and the Irish Chancellorebip paid him only $40,000. Resigning at the end of three months, he had to retire into private life, a pension of $20,000 being a poor equivalent for the vast and almost certain income be was earning before he took the ermine. Again from 1841 to 1846, he returned to the Irish Chancery bench, again retiring, on the defeat of his party, with a pension. In 1852, under Lord Derby's first Ministry, Sugden became Lord Chancellor of England, and was created Baron St. Leonards. He held the office for nine months, and then retired on a pension of $24,000 a year. Had he held the office only a single day, he would etill have received this pension.

From the very lowest rank, ability and character at the English bar have raised men to the Chancellorship, the highest dignity under the Crown. For example, since the majority of Chancellors, have literally risen from the ranks. John Scott created Earl of Eldon, was son of a coal-fitter at Newcastle. John Singleton Copley, now Lord Lyndhurst, born at Boston, and five times in that office, was the son of a painter. Henry Brougham, now Lord Brougham, was the son of a country gentleman of small estate. Thomas Wilde, afterwards Lord Truro, was son of an attorney. Edward Sugden, now Lord St. Leonards, was a barber's son. Frederick Thesiger, now Lord Chelmsford, is son of a ruined West Indian. On the other hand, Lord Erskine was son of a Scottish Earl and so poor that he took to law, after having vainly endeavored to obtain a living in the army and in the navy. Lord Cottenham came from a high and rich family. Lord Cranworth, who has just quitted the Wool-sock, was son of a clergyman, who was cousin to Lord Nelson, of the Nile, and Trafalgar. How these and other men arose to station, rank, reputation, and wealth, may be alluded to by-and-bye. At present we only aimed former times, he could only preside in the at letting some of our legal readers exactly Lords, and in the Court of Chancery, without understand the duties, advantages, emoluments, dignities, and uncertainty of the English Chancellorship.

SOUTHERN PROTECTION INSURANCE COMPANY, ALEXANDRIA, VA.—CAPITAL OVER $250,000, AND CONSTANTLY INCHEASING.
The charter of this Company offers more faorable advantages to the farmer and others. than any other company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the buil amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves oneeighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay: or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of THE CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE This company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five thou sand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over thirty thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having trebled our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe that by prudence, caution and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation

Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the County where such loss happened, to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company DIRECTORS:
